Carrie MacIntosh's practice focuses on construction, real estate, and general commercial matters. In these areas, Carrie counsels clients in connection with contract preparation, dispute avoidance, and dispute resolution. As a litigator, she has represented clients in a variety of settings, including business torts, employment disputes, construction claims, real estate development and financing disputes, entitlement and land use matters, and general contract disputes.

While in law school, Carrie was the recipient of the Emery Merit and Albert and Mae Lee Scholarships. She also received the CALI Excellence Award in Torts, Evidence, Environmental Protection Law, Real Estate Development, and Commercial Transactions; and the Witkin Award in Criminal Procedure, Advanced Torts, and Remedies. Carrie's prior work includes an internship with the Research and Law and Motions Departments at the Hall of Justice. She also worked as a Research Assistant to Professor Kenneth Manaster and an Academic and Professional Development Fellow while at Santa Clara University School of Law. Her prior experience also includes working for San Diego City Councilmember Kevin Faulconer as a constituent correspondent and intern coordinator.

Representative Matters/Cases

- Ongoing representation of public entity owner of a planned 800-mile, high-speed train system connecting the State's major urban centers. Representation includes advising on procurement, contract administration, and assisting in risk analysis, scheduling analysis, contract negotiation and drafting.
- Represented a design-builder joint venture in connection with the Los Angeles World Airport's consolidated rent-a-car facility public private partnership. Regularly negotiated risk allocation, provided legal analyses and opinions, and drafted key project agreements.
- Defended project owner in litigation brought by contractor in connection with a project involving installation of underground high-speed fiber
